Locked Up on a Charge of Causing Mr. Baer's Death.

Held on a Warrant Which Charges Him with Homicide.

Taken to the Eldridge Street Station Shortly Before Noon.

John H. Grabau, the brakeman on the Second Avenue Elevated Road, who is said to be sainly responsible for the death of young Mr. Baer, who fell into the street from Grabau's train Thursday evening, was taken into the Eldridge street police station shortly after 11.30 o'clock this morning by Detective Reap, to whom he had surrendered himself by direction of Col. Hain.

He was locked up on a charge of homicide, which is not bailable. The police had a good deal of trouble in getting hold of him. His address in the directory is 543 East Twelfth street. An Evening World reporter called there to see him to-day, but learned that he had moved some time ago. Where he had gone to the other tensnts in the house did not know. He is a married man and has a family. His badge number is 772.

Ward Detective M. H. Reap did not go to bed last night. He spent the time searching for Grabau. He had him corralled once yesterday, down in Col. Hain's office, at 79 Broadway, but the corporation magnates refused to give him up.
"I am an officer and want him," said Mr.

ntleman, who was addressed as Judge, ose name Detective Beap did not get, replied:

"This case is in the hands of the Coroner.
If he wants him let him send for him and we will produce the guard."

"But I must produce him in court before a police magnitrate," demurred Reap.

"Oh, that is not at all necessary," returned the Judge.

The detective then asked the guard's name and number, which was also refused. It was sent later to the Eldridge street station, and Reap procured a warrant for his arrest.

He also obtained a warrant for his arrest.

He also obtained a warrant for the arrest of Theodore Neuberger, the rear guard on the train. He arrested him this morning and arraigned him in the Essex Market Police Court.

Court.

Neuberger was discharged, as he swore that he knew nothing of the tragedy and there was no evidence to the contrary.

He and Capt. Cassidy are both very wrathy against the 'L' road people for their efforts to shield Grabau.

Col. Hain said yesterday in an interview printed in two morning papers:

'The affair was sad, very sad, but the guard was only obeying the orders of the gourd was only obeying the orders of the goundary, that the gates shall not be opened twice for any cause at any one station. This rule is backed by an act of the Legislature of 1881.

But don't you think the guard should have shown some common sense and opened the gate in a case of life or death like that?"

discretion."
Only one of the many witnesses who saw the guard's action has a word to say in his favor. He is a gentleman named Hall, who works in Butler Brothers' notion store at 380 works in Butler Brothers' notion store at 380 Broadway.

All he can say, however, is that the guard did not once succeed in shoving Mr. Haer off the platform, as has been stated.

The skull was fractured when the unfortunate man fell face downward in the street.

Mr. Baer was a handsome man, but his features were bruised almost boyond recognition by his fall into the street.

Deputy Coroner O'Meagher made an examination of the dead man's body and found that death had been caused by a fracture of the skull. The right arm and left leg had also been broken. They were broken by his collision with the guard rail on the end of the platform, and would not have caused death.

The body was removed from the under-taker's shop in Ludlow street to his home in Harlem yesterday. His wife, owing to the shock of her husband's terrible death, has been dangerously ill ever since. The funeral will be on Monday.

REICH'S IMPENDING DOOM.

The Wife Murderer Droops in His Cell While Priends Plan to Save His Life. ph Reich, the wife murderer, has just bee yed by Warden Osborne from the old prison to the new one in the Tomba. On the 20th of this month the death watch will be set upon him.

Reich is a prey to the deepest despondency. He will sit with a melancholy air, listices eyes and drooping frame for hours.

Several German citizens are interesting themselves to obtain from Gov. Hill a commutation of Reich's sentence from the death penalty to imprisonment for life.

"There is no doubt," said a prominent German, "but that there were extenuating circumstances were in Reich's crime. If he had had a skilful lawyer this side of his case would have been presented with the force which was possible to it. The jury feit that the man was entitled to merciful consideration. A petition to Gov. Hill will set forth these reasons, if enough names can be procured to make it avail, and I hope the poor wretch may be only imprisoned for life."

Congressman W. Bourke Cockran and ex-Judge Tappen.

Although the County Democracy leaders still insist that the Beard of Aldermen has no right to fill the vacancy, the proposition of The Evening World that such power dose exist in the Board is proved to be correct by chapter 292, Laws of 1887.

This is the act introduced by Assemblyman Shea, providing for two Aldermen from the Twenty-fourth Assembly District. The act refers to the President as a member of the Board and provides for the filling of a vacancy caused by the death "of a member" by the vote of a majority of the members elected to the Board.

The objection that the term of office of the President is two years is disposed of by the provision that the person so selected to fill the vacancy shall only hold office till Jan. 1 following, and the unappried term shall be filled at the next general election.

THEY HAD TO LOSE THE BABE

PITIFUL STORY OF THE WANDERINGS OF MARY M'GEE'S WAIF.

spurned from the Door of Every Institution the Wretched Mother Left Her Infant and $3 with the Gaetens Family-Gaetens, Consumptive and Destitute Got Rid of It by a Trick.

There could not be imagined a sadder cas in all its phases than that of the abandonment of the illegitimate baby-girl of Mary McGeo.

The mother is a young servant girl, who came here from Philadelphia and gave birth to the child at Bellevue Hospital Oct. 26.

The girl's devotion to her babe and her ap parent sense of her shame made her particularly interesting, and she was given a lodging at the Home for Friendless Girls, in Riv. ington street.

She was advised to place her child in an axylum, and tramped the city up and down with her babe in her arms in an effort to find asylum, and tramped the city up and down with her babe in her arms in an effort to find a place for it.

But she was denied admission by every charity where she applied, one excuse or another being given.

Wednesday night she confided her trouble to Mrs. Cecelia Gaetens, a consumptive inmate of the Rivington Street Home, and the latter volunteered that her husband, James Gaetens, would find a home for baby if the mother would pay $3.

Thursday evening a babe was found in the woods near One Hundred and Sixty-seventh street and the Macomb's Dam road. It was chilled to the bone, nearly starved to death, and the clothes in which it was wrapped were saturated by the rain, which was still falling.

Yesterday a Wosld reporter took the case in hand and soon established the identity of the waif as the child of Mary McGee.

James Gaetens and his wife were arrested and the morning they were arraigned before Police Justice Gorman at the Essex Market Court.

Gaetens and his wife were a pitiable sight.

Police Justice Gorman at the Essex Market Court.

Gaetens and his wife were a pitsable sight. The man is twenty-seven years old, but looks to be at least forty. His cheeks are sunken and cadaverous, his voice faint and husky, and his eyes are like tea saucers. He is too plainly in the last stages of consumption. His wife is not much stronger in appearance, but she has a hard, stony face and is very glib of tongue.

After Mary McGee had related her story Mrs. Gestens told that she and her husband took the babe on Thursday morning, Mary herself bringing it from the Rivington Street Home around into Christic street and delivering it to her.

The Gaetens rode up Madison avenue and to the end of the route. Then they walked across lots and over the bridge by the railroad.

On the other side of Central avenue, near a green cottage, they stopped, and Gaetens told her that Mr. Watson lived there and he would take the child. Then he went to the house, entered it and when he returned he said he had left the baby, paving $2 to Mr. Watson.

house, entered it and when he returned he said he had left the baby, paying $2 to Mr. Watson.

Gestens spread his thin white hands out in a piteous way. He said: "I have failed lately very fast. I was a plasterer, but I had no work in eleven weeks. Workmen have given me a little now and then. I live nowhere. I could give you a hundred numbers where I have stopped. My wife met me Wednesday night and told me of the child, and that I could get $3 for finding an asylum for it.

"What could a man do? I had no money, and here was $3. So I went up towards Macomb's Dam. I had heard that there was an asylum up there. I was inquiring, when I met a well-dressed man near the dam. I asked him, and he said he was in just that business and to bring the child to him next day. He would take care of it for $1. He was about thirty-five years old, had a brown or black mustache and wore a soft hat with a cord on it.

"So the mother gave the baby to my wife next morning and we went up there with it. I was to whistle and he would whistle, and then I would take the child to him, for he would not see any woman at all.

"So we did that. I do not see why my wife should try to get me in a scrape with this woman. As God is my judge, I did not leave the child in the fields!"

The examination was adjourned till Monday, and the Gaetens were remanded to Essex Market prison. Mary McGee was taken over to Blackwell's Island, where the child now is, to fully identify it as her babe.

MISS DOERSCH'S SHOE STORE RORRED.

Burglare Carry Off the Most of Her Stock

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.] NYACE, Nov. 10.—A daring burgiary was committed in tals place early this morning or late last night. Miss Katie Doersch is the owner of a large shoe store on the most public part of Broadway. When Miss Doersch entered the store this morning she was dismayed to see that thieves had been there and carried off a large amount of her stock. A number of boxes containing the most costly shoes and rubber boots had been taken from the ahelves, and the store presented a scene of great disorder. The money-drawer, which had been emptied, lay upon the noor. Entrance had been effected through a back window. One of the thieves left his old shoes and a pair of socks be-hind him. No trace of the burglars has as yet been discovered.

In the Tombe Court this morning Henry Reynolds was charged by William P. St. John President of the Mercantile Bank, with endeavor ug to cash a check representing $1,000 by fraudu lent precesses.

Reynolds, it was alleged, represented himself as the agent of C. J. Prince & Co., of Boston, who had forty barrels of turpentine in storage at the Metropolitan Steamship Company's warehouses. When he presented the check the bank officer doubted its validity and telephoned to the ateamship company's office, where the check was pronounced a forgery.

Reyholds will be examined Monday. His ball was fixed at $2,000, in default of which he will remain at the Tombs.

MISSING ROSE PARKS. Who Has Seen This Young Girl With the Black Velvet Cap?

Rose Agnes Parks, aged fifteen, left her home at West Seventeenth street, Nov. She was going to the Western Union office, at Broadway and Twenty-third street, to collect oney one her for folding circulars. She did not return and has not been heard from since. The police have been notified of her disappearance. The girl was tall and slim, of light complexion, with bice eyes, and having a sear on the right side of her chin. She wore a dark blue fiennel dress and a black velvet cap with gold quill in front.

"He was employed in a trimming house in the city, and on the morning of Dec. 4, 1879, he went to work as usual. He did not come home that night, and the next day we found that he had some trouble with his employer, on account of breaking a machine, and had left his place. I have tried frequently since then to hear of him, but got not one word of information.

"About two years ago, however, a nephew of mine, who looks like my boy, was coming to this city, when he was spoken to on the train by a young man, who called him Maxwell (the name of niy son) and asked him how long since ne had left California. My nephew was sick at the time, and did not pay much attention to the stranger, except to tell him that he had made a mistake.

"He never told me of this until the other day. Whether my son is in California now or not I don't know. Maxy was always a good boy, and there was no cause for him to leave home. He could draw ver; well and was always fond of books of travel. He is sandy-complexioned, and if he is alive now he must be a fine young man."

This idea is born of the fact that, according to the deal between Senator Matt Quay and the United Labor party leaders, the latter put out electoral tickets headed by their electors at large, James Redpath and Victor A. Wilder, the remaining thirty-four being Republicans.

Enough of these split tickets might have been voted to have deseated the Republican Electors-at-Large, Gen. William H. Seward and S. T. Stranshan, and to have elected Oswald Ottendorfer and Wilson Bissell, Democrats.

A careful canvass of the electoral vote of this city, made by an Evenina Wolld reporter at Police Headquarters this morning, shows that Seward and Stranshan ran behind their ticket but 1, 135 votes, giving evidence that the United Labor Party voted more straight Republican tickets than the splits.

As this splitting of tickets was done only in this eity, there is no hope of the election of even one Democratic elector in this State.
